

Candlelight Productions has been creating multi-camera video productions for the arts since May, 2000. Starting with a 2-camera shoot for a dance Hafla, our work has evolved into full blown 6-camera productions for all kinds of stage performances.

The company's owner, producer and videographer Rob Rothkopf, is also a musician who plays percussion, irish whistles, sax and a variety of other instruments. Having played for dancers and familiar with stage performance, his work has been said to "enhance the performance" for TV viewing, and "simply amazing".

For dancers, preference is given to the choreographer's perspective (wide shots), and when additional cameras are utilized, they are smoothly worked in to highlight individual dancer's technique when possible (expression, footwork, shimmies, etc). Sometimes, side cameras also have better angles to show entire troupes but from a vantage point that allows the viewer to see more detail (they also pick up stage audio better than cameras in the back)

The information in this spreadsheet is Copyright © Candlelight Productions, and is intended to provide general pricing information for short-dance event videography. Pricing is subject to change, and additional options may be available. When in doubt, contact Rob for more information :-)
